The "Freakout" Issue

CROSSWORDS, ART, AND JUICY SECRETS!!!

#1

There comes a time in every college student's life where they get to do the stuff they went to college for instead of writing essays about gorillas and calculating the speed of something flying through the air. For those majoring in gorillas and things flying through the air, that time might have been all four years. For me, it has been the past couple months. Time to compile some of the highlights, make it into a pdf, and print it a bunch of times at the library with my remaining gauchoprint credits. Yipieeeee!!!!

Dune Part Two... best theater experience of my life so far. Made me want to go surfing again to harness the power of standing on a rapidly-moving thing in nature (sandworms). The day after I had no choice but to go on a Dune pondering walk on the beach while listening to the soundtrack. It was possibly the most beautiful sunset of the year, my hair was majorly billowing in the wind, and there was no one else on the sand. It was magical. On our second watch me and Dee got blue gatorade to take a gulp of during the (spoiler alert) water of life scene (and gummy worms). The drawing on the upcoming pages started out as just a doodle of the billboard for the spring break comic, but then I accidentally made a fully-rendered Zendaya, and consequently had no choice but to make a full Timothee Chalamet next to her (don't you hate when that happens).

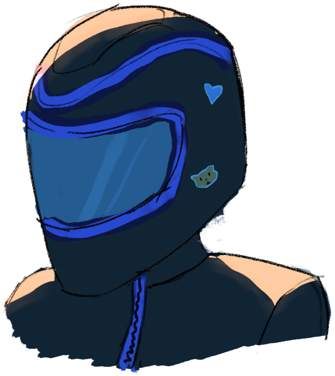
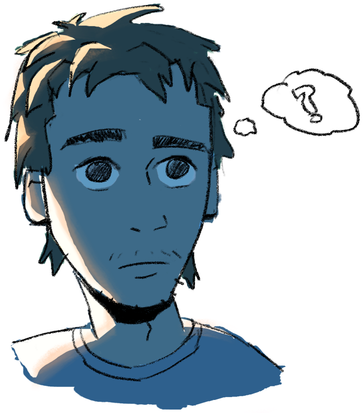
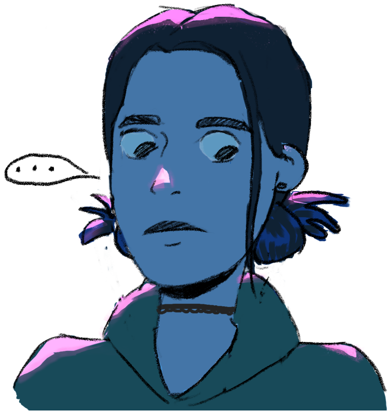
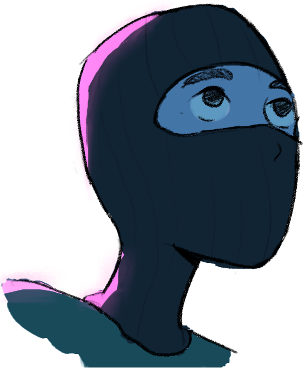
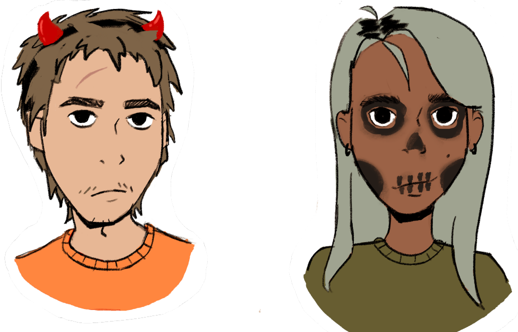
Over the summer I thought about what my my theoretical spider-girl outfit would be, but turned into a whole other story. Super-powers, drama, stray cats, explosions, evil science, crime-solving, the whole shabang. Maybe the comic pages I made will see the light of day in the future... but for now here's some of the other drawings I made.



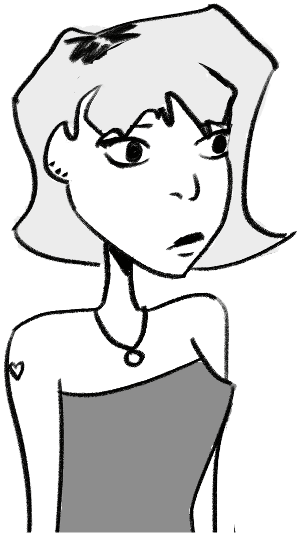


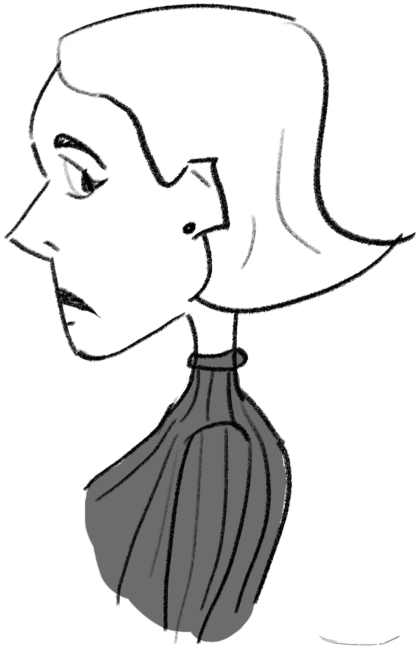


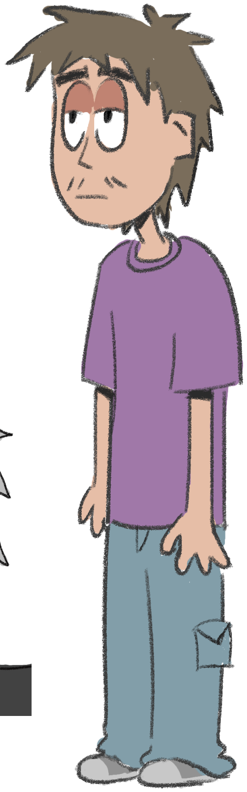


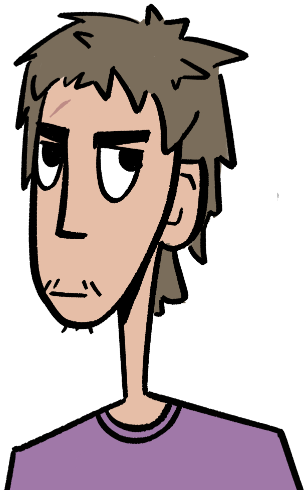


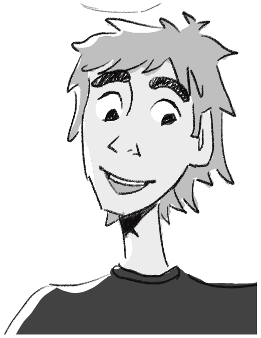
Halloween stickers

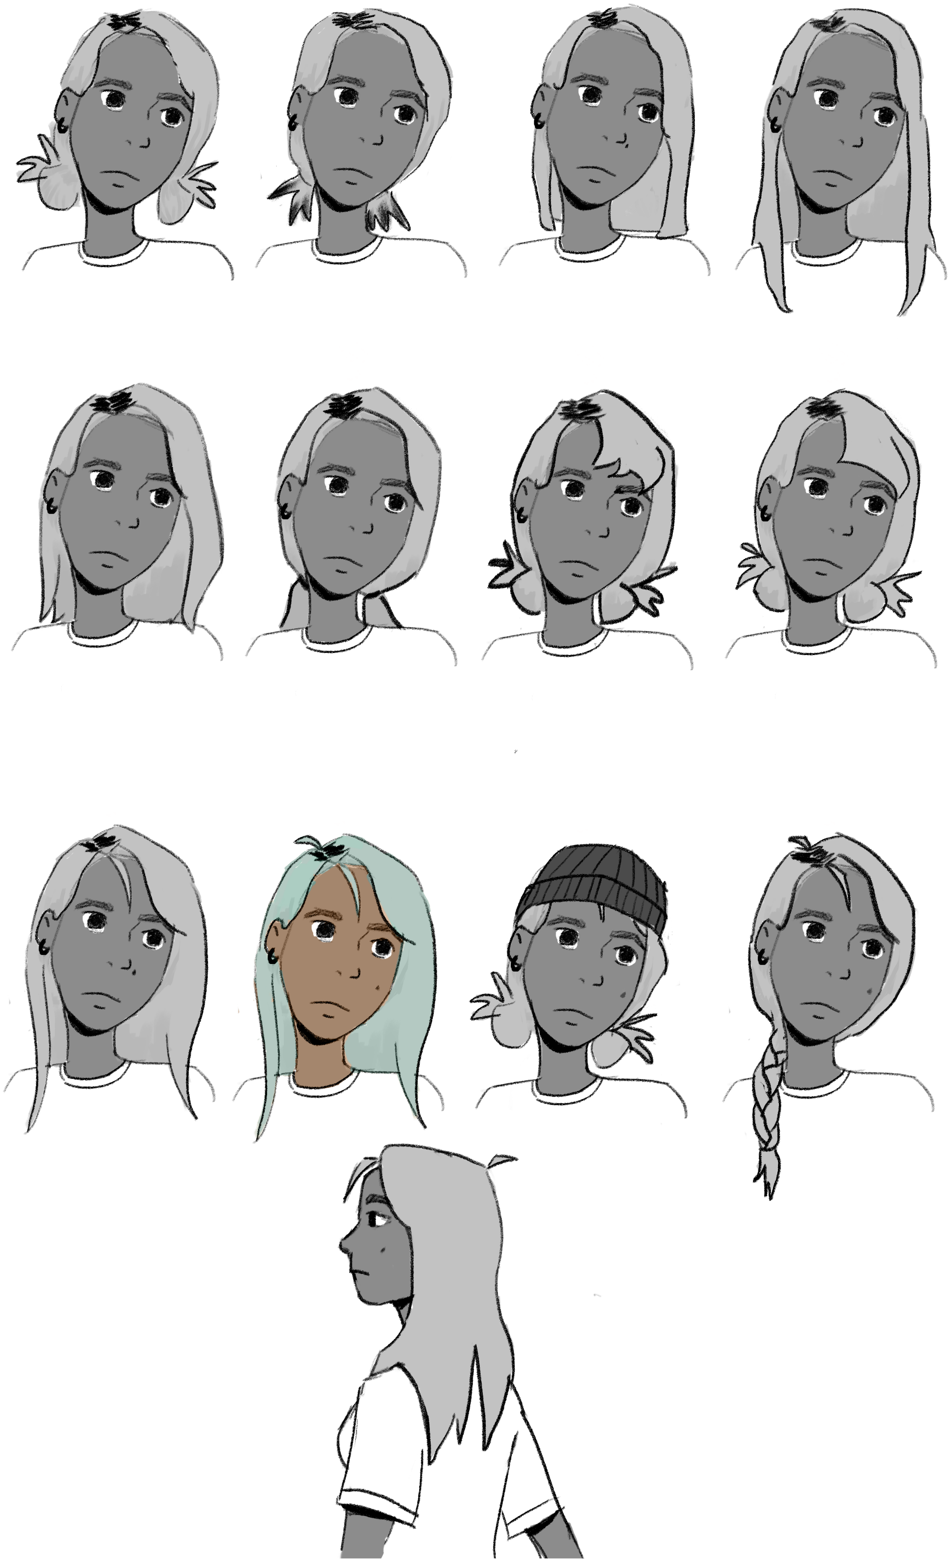


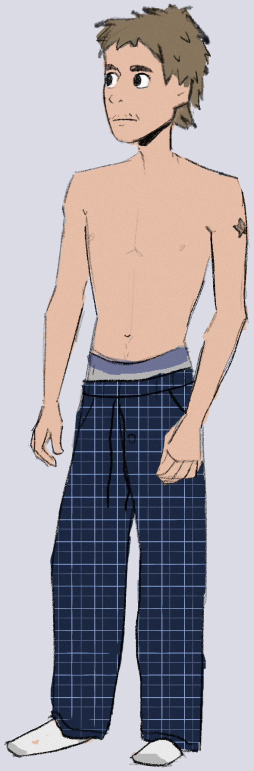


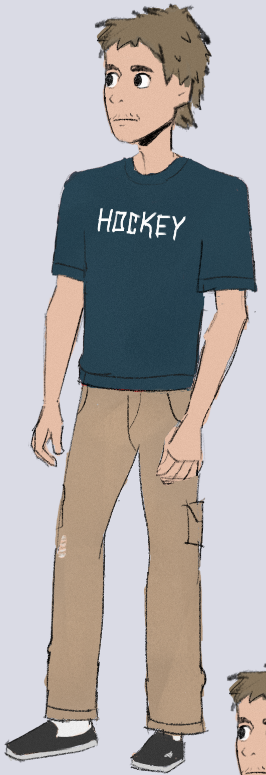












Some of these outfits I saw out in the wild. I saw the hoodie one in the co-op, and took a sneaky pic so I could draw it later. (Kind of creepy but it was for art).

A little story about the IV man: Hannah and I were at a band show, and one of the real-life guys that IV man is based on appeared. So she was pointing him out to someone, and as she turned around, none other than real-life guy #2 was right behind her. Truly harrowing.

OMG... Lag Mag is back (for the first time) and better than ever. In this issue, absurd amounts of hot chocolate are consumed, Dune is pondered, hormone problems are encountered, and mustached men (loose and unsupervised) are everywhere we look. No wonder we are all having a freakout (or maybe its just me...).
